

University of Arkansas, Bachelor of Interior Design, Student Achievement Data

Job Placement: 100 percent of May 2013 graduates who actively pursued employment were employed by January 1, 2014; 55 percent had employment immediately following graduation, 22 percent within one to three months following graduation, and 22 percent within three to six months.

Acceptance into Graduate Programs: No members of the May 2013 graduating class had applied for graduate school as of March 2014.

Graduation Rates: 50 percent of the 2013 Bachelor of Interior Design graduates began the University of Arkansas as interior design majors. These students completed their degrees within four years.

50 percent of the 2013 Bachelor of Interior Design graduates began the University of Arkansas in majors other than interior design. These students graduated from the University within five to seven years, depending upon when they identified interior design as their career choice.

Attrition Rates: For interior design students, attrition rate is highest between the first and second years of study; 30 percent of freshmen enrolled in the 2013 spring semester Interior Design Studio chose not to return to the program for the 2014 fall semester.